The changes we are responsible for shaping are profound.

APPLICATION PROCESS NOW OPEN!

Coming to the San Francisco Bay Area this December, the first two trainings for new members of an emerging national network of direct action teams positioned at the intersection of racial healing and climate justice.<sup>1</sup>

Several powerful organizations (including Climate Disobedience Center, the Possibility Alliance, the New Community Project, and East Point Peace Academy) have played a key role in developing the DNA for this new constellation of direct action teams.

This will be a 36-hour training (4 full days) designed to deepen our trust and connection with one another as we explore the core elements of the network's theory of change—reparations & atonement, climate action, fierce vulnerability, personal vocation, and self-organizing/emergence. The training will be offered in two separate formats:

Training A (weekend format):

Consecutive weekends of December 8 & 9 and December 15 & 16, 2018, at the Oakland Peace Center. This non-residential format is especially designed for Bay Area-based participants.

Training B (weeklong format):

Week of December 10-14, 2018, in Sebastopol, CA (Sonoma County). This residential format is designed for folks traveling from afar.

The trainings will operate on a gift economy basis. Financial support will be made available to cover travel and other costs that might otherwise prohibit folks from attending. A reparations fund has been established to ensure that interested people of color will have no financial barrier to attendance. People from highly impacted communities and changemakers already organized into teams of three or more, or who will be attending with prospective teammates, will be given priority.

The first step of the application process is to read the new zine about the network.<sup>2</sup> If you resonate deeply with the content of the zine and want to take the next steps in the application process send and email to stilltobenamednetwork@gmail.com or call (207) 338-5719.
